

Aims & Scope

Pakistan Journal of Radiology (PJR; www.pakjr.com) is the official journal of Radiology Society of Pakistan (RSP) informs its readers of timely, pertinent, and important topics affecting the practice of diagnostic radiologists, nuclear physicians, interventional radiologists, medical physicists, and radiation oncologists. In so doing, PJR improves their practices and helps optimize their role in the health care system and provides them a platform to share their scholastic work. PJR provides a forum for informative, well-written articles on health policy, clinical practice, practice management, data science, and education. PJR engages its readers in a dialogue that ultimately benefits patient care. To foster the research culture, PJR applies No Processing or Publication Charges. PJR editorial section works in a swift coherent manner for fast review and decision and also provide authors PDFs, a liberal copyright policy and free online access to website. Please click here for more information on our http://www.pakjr.com/ojs/public/journals/1/tutorial_PJR_submission.pdf

Ethical Guidelines for Authors

We expect authors, submitting their manuscripts to Pakistan Journal of Radiology, to agree upon the expected ethical guidelines:

- Authors must adhere to the fact that their work is original and does not infringe the intellectual property rights of any party, person or entity. Scientific articles are deemed to be free of plagiarism and therefore, cannot be construed on existing publications, including their own previously published work.
- All authors, associated with the development of the manuscript with significant scientific contribution, must be mentioned on the title page since each of them holds equal rights regarding accountability for the content. One of the authors must represent as the corresponding author, who will be in contact till the publication process is completed.
- All co-authors' consent to publication and being named as co-author must be presented through the Copyright Transfer Agreement by the Corresponding author.
- The manuscript submitted to PJR should not be submitted simultaneously to any other journal.
- Authors should clearly declare that the work is not published before and it is not based in substance on any previously published material, either in whole or in part.
- Authors must ensure to cite all relevant references appropriately in the vancouver format. Any information, useful to the manuscript, which is obtained from sources such as conversations, correspondence, or discussion with some third party, should be reported or cited in the reference section. Prior permission must be taken from that third party before citing the same.